Amacı / Purpose	This course will focus specifically on Victorian fiction (1837-1901), which represents the Golden Age of the novel in English. The course acknowledges and explores the parallels between Britain of the nineteenth century and America of the new millennium. Much like our society today, Britain during this time was a nation facing unprecedented technological growth and social change.	--
İçeriği / Content	Through the study of the novel, the short story, poetry, and drama, this course will examine the social, political, and cultural ideology of Britain during an era in which it rose to dominance as both a nation and an empire. Some of the issues we will investigate include the effects of the industrial revolution and urbanization, the implications of advances in science and technology such as the railroad and the telegraph, and the ethics of imperialism.
